SAN SIMEON, Cal., Feb. 21. IF YOU get a good piece of land and take care of it—anywhere in the march of American progress—that land will take care of you.

FOR instance: Mrs. C. McLeod paid $35,000 for the Bender lot on Ventura boulevard, in Los Angeles quite far out. She probably got a bargain. Eight years ago, the lot sold for $6,500. Sixteen years ago, a syndicate "taking a chance on Los Ange les' future" bought a lot of land including that lot, for FIFTY DOL LARS an ACRE. In 1867 the same land sold for thirty-seven and a half cents an acre.

BUT remember that some land now sold for fifty dollars an acre is not worth ten dollars. SEE what you buy, and know, for yourself, WHY you buy it, before you invest your

And remember that every American community has its great bargains and possibilities. If you cannot make good real estate investments where you are, you will probably make worse investments elsewhere.

Research Pays

The importance of industrial research, which has been recognized by the American pottery industry, of which the East Liverpool district, with its modern plants, is the center, is attested by the fact that leaders in the manufacturing world are now spending $200,-000,000 a year in such work in this country.

According to a recent report, 1,000 corporations, including several in this section, now maintain their own research departments.

The value of the work is indicated by the National Industrial Conference board's statement that the industries spending most on research five years ago are those which have made the greatest relative growth

This truth has influenced ceramic manufacturers to establish research departments in their plants and bring in the most available chemists to take charge of the work. It is just as essential in the pottery business as in other industries.

It is impossible to place any limit on the discoveries which are bound to come from all this research, especially in the pottery industry. The scientific and material progress made in the past 25 years in manufacturing lines other than ceramics should prove to be the merest beginnings when compared with the advancement which may logically be expected from the next 25 years. In the end all this research results in benefits for the whole public.

Good Teaching

An up-to-date, well equipped school building is a fine thing and shows educational progress. But is it not of less importance than the quality of teaching that is found inside?

The question has been raised by various persons recently. A college president, in an address, said that teaching ought to come before research and advanced study in a teacher's activities. It seemed a startling statement in view of the recent tendency to consider it a professor's duty to follow some line of individual research, to write books and do other scholarly things not directly connected with his pupils in the classroom.

The other day a leading educator, Prof. Robert J. Leonard of Columbiana university, sounded the same note in reference to high schools.

"It seems to me that the great need in secondary education is to improve the quality of teaching," he said. "I believe that more will come from an attempt along this line than in discussing further the content of the curriculum.

"In only two instances in a wide survey of secondschoools has my attention been directed to the quality of the teaching, though great emphasis was placed on buildings and equipment.

"I was told by the president of an educational institution that his work there was completed when he had succeeded in paying off the college indebtedness and acquired new buildings and equipment. It would seem that he was just ready to begin his real work

The Long-Distance Horseman

Aime Felix Tschiffley is now in the United States on his way to New York City. He is on the last stage of his horseback journey from Buenos Ayres to our metropolis. It took him two months in the saddle to reach the international border at Laredo, Texas.

When he has finished the whole trip something may have been accomplished. It is a little hard to tell just what. But his long ride has its interesting phases.

Last August an American aviator attempted a nonstop flight from Georgia to Brazil and was lost. The fact that the horseman has come farther in safety on a journey connecting the two continents does not mean that riding is the right way and flying the wrong way to travel. Automobiles some day undoubtedly will follow Tschiffley's route far more comfortably and speedily than he has done. And airplanes, following a course worked out for their speed and safety, will take passengers north or south more swiftly than the autos. The long-distance horseman is only doing a stunt.

Oratory Limited

Oratory in the Spanish parliament is being severely regulated. Speakers hereafter will be limited to 45 minutes on any given subject, divided into two periods of 30 and 15 minutes respectively.

This action is taken by vote of the assembly, but soldiers and dictators in Spain and elsewhere are notoriously stingy about letting orators orate.

In the Italian parliament, from present indications, pretty soon the allotted time of speakers will be nothing at all. The members will perform their entire duty merely by voting-and Mussolini will tell

The United State senate, however, will continue orating as usual. And really, despite all the criticism heaped upon the heads of our marathoning senafors, there's some virtue in their long-windedness after all. Whatever else the senate may be, it's a forum of free speech; and where speech is free, there is little danger of tyranny.

End of The World

The end of the world begins this year, says an American minister, and the wind-up will last for seven years. He is sending a warning to churches and mission stations throughout the world, basing his forecast on the book of Revelation.

This is a deep subject. The minister may be right. But the world, having outlived so many cosmic firealarms, is skeptical.

If we are granted a little freedom of interpretation, we may all agree that he is right. Not in detail, but in principle. The world will come to an end for a lot of people this year and succeeding years-by natural death and otherwise.

Every day is the end of the world for many; also the beginning for many. And lucky is the man or woman who, in the midst of life, can see a new world every morning, and say, "We start from here"

By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.-Two young people ecently attracted wide attention by having a marlage ceremony performed in which they exchanged rows to live together until "love dies," instead of the conventional until-death-parts troth. It was heralded is another example of the groping after a substitute or the ancient and honorable estate of matrimony. and served to revive interest in what a Denver jurist ias made famous as "companionate marriage.

No better authority can be found on the subject of ompanionate marriage than Judge Ben B. Lindsey, of Colorado, because he is the man who has brought nto popular use the terms long employed by sociologists in describing marriage, "companionate" 'family." He claims to have evolved nothing new, out to have analysed marriage as it is today, and to have proposed a plan whereby it might be made like the present Fourth of July, "safe and sane."

Judge Lindsey defines companionate marriage as "legal marriage, with legalized birth control, and with the right to divorce by mutual consent for childless couples, usually without payment of alimony. Family marriage may be the outgrowth of a marriage originally entered into as companionate, a couple finding that their life together has been sufficiently happy and successful to warrant the brnging of children into the world, or it may be entered nto at the outset by those who are ready to assume he responsibility of having children, and who do not are to leave a simple way out in cast of failure to get on" in their venture.

Free love and trial marriage must not be conused with the companionate, insits Judge Lindsey, ointing out that free love is an unmarried union, and hat trial marriage is predicated on a basis of impermanence. Trial and companionate marriage both idvocate birth control, and divorce by mutual conent for childlesss couples, but the psychological em-phasis is fundamentally different. Companionate narriage is a compromise with traditional marriage and is genuinely if not technically different from the rial marriage in that the spirit is one of endeavor to promote a permanent union. By living together without children until they are reasonably sure of their compatibility and their financial responsibility, married couples will not have children whose lives are empittered by the divorce court.

The howl of race suicide is silenced by the fact that nost people do desire children, and that children of a arefully planned marriage will be better and happier. He denied that the trouble with marriage lies with the nen and women who enter that state, but avers that it ies with the present institution, based on the old heories of property and possession. Without social coercion, the judge claims, men and women will assume noral responsibility and there will be that spiritual stimulus within to create a lasting love that rises above obstacles and misunderstandings. In spite of his simplifying divorce procedure, Judge Lindsey insists that he 'oes not believe in divorce, and that his proposed forms of marriage will prevent it. A narriage without back-breaking responsibilities for the inprepared will permit harmonious growth for the assumption of responsibilities, according to his view. However, an honest means of procuring divorce must be provided for those who are so unfortunate as to make a Judge Lindsey points out that his proposed legisla-by would not change the fundamental status and practile Had he been a Viking of the ion would not change the fundamental status and practice of marriage, but would make it flexible and adaptable to the needs of society and impose on no one. If persons did not approve of birth control and divorce by nutual consent, they need not practice them.

HASKIN DAILY NEW YORK Day By Day

- By O. O. McIntyre.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.-As grand as craze. Mr. Molnar is reputed to wear not grand enough for many patrons. At their own expense they knock individual tastes.

New bathrooms are installed, so are sun rooms, and sometimes pipe organs. Succh apartments are usually manned by a quota of personal servants not attached to the hotel. Yet the tenants have all the service the hotel provides plus their own. It offers living on a scale not possible in apartment houses.

There are some who take an entire floor of a hotel wing with the space of from 15 to 20 rooms. And what pops the eyes of many of us from the forks of the creek is that these apartments are usually occupied only six months of the year. One bachelor had two rooms converted into a bath.

The floor is of sea green glass with wate flowing under it and the walls and ceiling are paneled with mirrors. The plumbing fixtures are of sterling silver and the cost exceeded $50,000. The space rental alone is $10,000 a year.

In one of the hotels overlooking Central Park, a millionaire has the entire frontage of one floor and his rental is $73,000 a year. Hotels make no reductions in such instances because a family of say five occupying 17 rooms represents a loss to the dining room.

This splendor in hotel living is a gesture of prosperity springing up in the past five years. It marks the almost complete passing of the family mansion in the city proper. Those who have not gone to the de luxe apartment houses have gone to hotels.

Price cutting in permanent waving has become contagious, "Cut throat" prices, we might say. Shops spring up here and there with inexperienced, untrained operators using cheap machines and cheap supplies. Even at that they cannot show a margin of profit. Prices should be higher as longer hair is in vogue and boyish cut or shingle is not worn by up-to-date women.

We introduced permanent waving in East Liverpool in 1920. Our high price equipment is paid for, our reputation made, and to combat this price cutting evil we are going to operate at a loss until April 1st.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calonel indeed of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their clive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, head-aches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

The 126-pounders will headline the: F. O. E. program for the night of Ohio Wesleyan

Monday, February 27.
Prefacing the Stahura-Gallagher shindig, Mickey Hart of McKeesport and George Ross of Carnegie, lightweights, will tangle in the semi-final six rounds.
None other than Michael Harding, Home Stretch of six rounds.

Stahura's manager, declares that the Braddock featherweight carries a knockout punch in either hand and ranks as one of the most feared feathers in the Pittsburgh district.

On numerous occasions Stahura has left the feather division to mingle with the boys of the lightweight ranks to obtain bouts and his record includes victories over a number of good Keystone staters, including Jack Mc-Farland, K. O. Ferry, Teddy Welch. Young Rudy, Joe Novak, Stanley Williams, Bobby Young, Mickey Conroy, Frankie Porto, Steve O'Malley, K. O. Johnny Michaels and others.

And Reed Brown, who does the booking for Stahura's opponent here, also stresses Patsy Gallagher's ability day night in a pair of Buckeye Ath-letic association games that practito punch rather than any talent he may have for the more scientific art of boxing. Methodists, who, after this week, have only one more game to play.

The South Sider has punched with Stahura before, so there will be no need for formal introductions. A punch in the snout will be the only meet Saturday night. Wooster won calling card extended in this scrap.

Gallagher has also fought Phil Goldstein, Kid Carpentier, Alvie Miller, Jimmy Perry and others. Ross, semi-finalist, is a stable mate of Gallagher's while Hart, who will be Ross' playmate in the semi-windup, is a member of the Harding fold. As customary, the two-four-round-Giberson, by Arion Guy (4) 1:59½—ers which open the program will bring the home talent into action.

ATHENS, O., Feb. 21.-In an effort to avenge a one-point defeat, sustained in their initial Buckeye contest of the year and to break the clean slate of the fast traveling Cincinnati Bearcats, the Ohio court squad will participate in a strenuous practice program, preliminary to the Bearcat-Bobcat clash 54 to 24. here, Feb. 22.

Improvement in basket shooting and the addition of a few new offensive formations will constitute the major portion of the Ohio rehearsals. Offensively, the Ohioans have held their own with all Buckeye teams throughout the season, but lack of consistent scorers has resulted in the loss of sev eral contests by small margins. Coach Grover plans to have his candidates in top form in this feature of the game for the coming clash.

The Ohio mentor will also make some changes in the Ohio defensive movements. Up to the present time the Bobcats have been using a zone defense, relying on forcing their opponents to resort to long attempts. The Bearcats are reported, however, to have several cagers especially effective in long shots, and the local de-fense will probably be extended in an effort to check the Cincinnati cagers farther down the floor.

The burden of the Ohio attack will logically center on Brammer, upon whom will fall the duty of stopping Bolton, giant Bearcat center; DuBois, running guard and an excellent shot as well as a good defensive man, and Burkholder, star forward and leading scorer for the local team. These men, along with a number of reserve can didates have been opposing the freshman squad in recent practice contests and are fairly certain to participate.

"Salvation is a know-so affair. If we could not know when we were saved we could have no peace. Christ came to bring the assurance of sins forgiven which brings peace. By every way in which we know any-thing, we know God."

"Christians know they are saved, first by faith, second by the impartation of spiritual life, and third, by the fruits of the Holy Spirit in their lives and lastly by the direct wit-ness of the Holy Spirit to their conscience that they are born of God. WEN LEE is considered—and justly so—one of the most promising "finds" in a long time. Here is the young lady of the blonde type so preferred by gentlemen, but not the ordinary "baby-faced" type at all.

Gwen is essentially a character comedienne, or soubrette, if you insist upon the old-fashioned word. Her work in the support of Norma Shearer in "After Midnight" sent Gwen on the elevator of fame. With a minor role, she came pretty near "stealing" the picture away from the clever star.

Although rated as a comedienne, Miss Lee is quite an eyefull. If you don't believe it, look at her photo!

An all star cast supports Miss Moore in this picture. Marshall Neilan, famous director, who made some of the star's outstanding hits, directed "Her Wild Oat," adding innumerable comedy touches for which he is so renowned.

"Her Wild Oat" shows Miss Moore as a little lunch -wagon owner who takes her life's savings and spends every cent on one week of luxury and thrills at an exclusive sea-coast resort. Her hoped-for splash in society is only a ripple, however, and she is persuaded by a newspaper reporter friend to obtain recognition by impersonating a duchess. Hits Salary Increases. Editor, Review, East Liverpool, Ohio.

Dear Sir: I notice by your editorial in last Friday or Saturday's issue of the Review that you were complimenting the mayor on his stand taken against the emergency clause in the policemen's wage ordinance. I agree with you on your stand. But there was also an emergency clause in the ordinance passed by the old council which granted the mayor an $1,800, an increase over $1,200 to which it had perviously been reduced. Had this clause not been inserted the mayor would not have received the increase. Regarding the veto of the salary raise of Chief Engineer Cox of the water works, I want to say that out of all the wage increases given by both councils to the extent of nearly $5000 per year so far, if there is one man in the employ of the city who did earn an increase, it is this man-I worked in this department for 10 years, and I know whereof I speak He is saving in materials, etc, he goes about his job as if he was working for himself.

Of course, probably the men on the streets are worth all they are getting. I hope so, but do you think there is any comparison between the two positions?

I fear very much that the next administration will be the goats in this wage-raising deal of the present council, because of the fact that I don't see how they can raise the money to pay these increases, inasmuch as I understand that the tax duplicate shows an increase of only about $30,000 over last year, including the annexed territory.

Hoping you can find a little space for publication of this letter, as I believe it is justly due the last council as a vindication of some of the wrongs that they probably committed during

Dear Sir: As a resident of East Liverpool and a taxpayer I am opposed settled condition. Whenever a city to the greater part of the salary grabincreases the wages above the aver- bing that is going on here. When we age labor of the various manufactur-ers within that city, it makes the that our taxes were to be used to in-

Now what I mean by that is this, if there was a survey of the entire labor the officers who patrol the streets. No force employed by the manufacturers city is able to overpay an officer that within our city, I venture to say that is courteous, efficient and impartial in the average wage, including all the performance of his duty. Whether the singing of "Annie Laurie" in the churches of Glasgow, Scotland, would lead to prosecution of the singers, was a question raised at a recent meeting of the Glasgow Presbytery, the senior Ecclesiastical Court of that city. One of the officers reported that the Performing Rights Sociey, Ltd., was becoming very vigilant and that if there were sung in a church hall or church many songs that long had been thought immune from copyright restrictions, there might be trouble. "Annie Laurie" was one of the songs mentioned. Rev. Stewart ! Cameron said that the prosecutions of the society has caused a sort of bandage on churches as regards their music. A Thrilling Story of the Night Clubs By Phillip Dunning and George Abbott,

"What's the matter? Roy went at once to Billie.

te repeated, anxiously.

"Her mother-" said Mazie Billie rushed impulsively to Roy, her cheeks streaked with tears.. "Oh, Roy-she must of had a stroke or something-She was all right last week-a telegram from Mary-maybe she's dying. Oh, dear, oh, how sould I have acted this way!"

"You didn't do anything, darling," Mazie tried to

Roy pulled her straight into his arms. He was a Attle frightened by the extent of her grief. "It's all right, kid," he said-"everything's all right now. You're among friends-we'll take care of you"- And as she continued to weep uncontrollably, he patted her back gently, saying in a sort of croon—"There. There." "Gee, I can't stand seein' her like that," said Mazie, walking up and down. "It's come out all right, take it from me," Roy continued. "Everything's goin' to be all right, Billie."

"I-I want to go home"-she sobbed. That was what Roy was waiting to hear. "Of course you do," he said, instantly, "and I'm right here to take you, too, honey. The sooner the better, so stop your out of here fast." He was pulling her toward the stairs, anxious eyes on the sliding doors between the two tooms, through which came the dulled sounds of thricking and thump, thump, thumping on the piano.

"You're so good to me," Billie cried, wiping her eyes with the back of her hand. "You bet I'm good to you-why shouldn't I be? Ain't we pals through thick and thin, that's us, kid." was getting her up the stairs as quickly as he could "Now you hurry and jump into your traps, honey and we'll be on the train for Trenton in twenty-five min-

The sliding doors were flung back and Steve came through, in a burst of blinding light, coarse laughter and raucous music. Mazie saw him and rushed to him 'Oh, Steve, Billie's got to go home-her mother's sick.' She handed him the wire that she still held, crumpled

Billie turned to him, apologetically. "I'm awfully serry," she sniffed. "Mazie have you got a handker-

Mazie shook her head, but Roy took out his large Que-bordered silk one and gently wiped Billie's swollen Steve strode over with the air of complete posses-

"Well, that's tough luck, but we'll see what we can do," he said. "To hell with the party. I gotta get you home. Hurry up now, the car's out back. I'll have you out there in no time.' Katle ambled in from the hall with a second tele-

Roy looked pugnaciously at Steve. "You don't need to bother, Mr. Crandall, everything is already arranged. Katle drawled, indolently. "Here's another one, Miss

"What?" Billie cried, her heart leaping. Could this second one be telling of the death of her mother? Steve took the telegram and tore it open. "Almost like an opening night, or something," observed Katie, wandering away with an audible yawn. Steve grunted and rubbed his chin. "What's it say?" gasped Billie. "She's not—"

Steve read aloud, slowly. "Your wire received. Stay at party and have a good time. Mother." They looked at each other bewildered, with the exception of Roy Lane who became violently red and mur-muring. "She must a got better? turned away, confused. "Aain't that peculiar?" Mazie said, thoughtfully and suspiciously. "I don't see-"

"Sometimes those things get mixed," Roy offered half-heartedly. "I'll say they do," Mazie said, directing her remark straight at him. There was a pause. Billie stared from one telegram to the other, shaking her head, miserably, "Well, everything's all right, anyhow," Steve finally said to Billie, cheerfully-"See? All that worry for nothing. So dry up those tears and powder the little lose and join the bunch." Roy gulped, putting as much authority into his voice as he could muster up, under the circumstances. "I think as long as we planned to go, Billie, the best thing would be to start out now and see for sure if everything's all right. I'll take you home—" And the pulled her by the arm, but Steve held tightly to the other "Of course she ain't going home!" he growled in an ugly voice.

"It seems to me, i's the wisest thing to do," faultered

"No, she's going to stay!" Steve said with finality, pulling Billie up toward the sliding doors. "Come along, Bllie. You come on too, Lane. Do your clowning.

The hoofer clenched his fists. His voice rose shrilly. "I'm particular what kind of society I'm seen with!" he flung at Steve Steve started toward him at once. "Wait a min-

"I don't know as I will!" Roy retorted promptly, fists till clenched. "What do you mean?" Steve was closer to him, eyes moldering.

"What do you mean?" Steve was still closer to him, aw thrust out. They looked like two game-cocks about o fight. Nick Verdis came trotting in from the cabaret expecting something like this.

"I mean Billie ought to get out of here-and as for ne, I wouldn't stay and entertain your gang of goofers f you kissed my foot in Macy's window at high noon!" loy was literally seeing red.

"Why, you dancing tramp!" Steve said, while Nick ittempted to step between them.

But Roy had thrown caution and reason to the four vinds. "I know all about you!" he shouted. "It's guys like you give New York a bad name!' Steve raised his voice also. "You waxer-floor bum!" "Steve, easy," cautioned poor Nick, wringing his lands, "you want people out there to hear?" Steve managed to control himself. "Tell him to set!" he ordered Nick. Nick shot out an ineffectual 'Get!"—interrupted by Mazie who had grabbed Steve and was looking at both telegrams. "Say," she cried. "I just thought of something. This last wire is an answer to Billie's. Now, the other one is an answer to something else. I'll bet my winter underwear the boy-scout framed it himself!"

"You're full of chestnuts!" Roy said, becoming red

"Framed what?" Nick asked.

"He was telephoning long distance," Mazie recollected, glaring at Roy. "Billie, you told me yourself-"Maloney Brothers, that's all"-said Roy.

Behind the tense group, Dolph appeared between the sliding doors, sensing trouble, his little eyes alert, his body taut. Some of the Chicago gang peered over his shoulders.

"He got the Maloney Brothers to send the wire! shouted Mazie, pointing melodramatically at the hoofer. "Roy, you didn't!" Billie cried, incredulously.

"Certainly I didn't" Roy denied. "You certainly did!" said Mazie.

"So you framed a wire on her?" sneered Steve. "That's the kind of tricks you're up to. eh?" Billie stared at Roy, eyes wide and dry. "Roy, you wouldn't scare me like that—"

"Don't pay any attention to any of 'em." he said, and then wavering a trifle-"Anything I done, I guess I know if I done it."

Billie detected the truth in his eyes. "You did!— Oh, that's the dirtiest trick anybody could ever do! Oh, Roy, making me think—" She turned away, quivering. "Now, Billie, listen-" Roy pleaded, hurt terribly by her wounded expression. She turned back to him in a fury. "I don't want to listen—" she fairly screamed—"I don't want anything to do with you—you big sap!

You Meet Septics in the Movies!

There is a certain fastidiousness which habits of cleanliness cannot achieve alone. The person you sometimes suspect of carelessness may have bathed within the hour.

If you are a septic, soap and water will not solve the difficulty. Nor will any refreshant neutralize unpleasant vaporings of the body, or the breath for any length of time.

Nobody is septic by nature. It is a condition anyone can correct. Just a few days are sufficient to take the taint out of perspiration, and render one's breath as pure as can be; and this perfect personal cleanliness made permanent. Ask any doctor-or nurse-about

You may not know whether you are a septic. Try some calcium wafers, and see! If there is any stagnant matter in the system, everything will speedily be sweet and clean. Your skin will be less acrid; color improved; calcium correction even brightens eyes and whitens teeth! And you will never need another harsh cathartic from the time you have learned to prevent even, semi-constipation by just occasionally taking a tiny calcium tablet.

In only five days you may feel and look like a different person, and a box of calcium wafers will be sent you FREE for this demonstration that has fairly astounded men and women who then they were in perfect condition! Write the Stuart Co., Dept S.96, Marshall, Mich., or get pocket size now for 10c at any drug store; or the 60c family size.
